Ten Tips for Spreading the Good Green Word

Thank you for being a part of the USGBC-Missouri Gateway Chapter Green Schools Quest! We hope you learn a lot and have fun along the way! One of the most important green actions you can take is to share what you learn with others. We have put together ten tips to help you spread the word about your efforts to green your school.

Remember, WHERE you learn matters! A green school is a healthy school. It is healthier for you and for the planet. Go Green Schools!

Ten Tips for Spreading the Good Green Word

1. Announce updates & results of your Green School Quest project over the school's PA system.
2. Write an article about your experience in the school newsletter or on your school's website.
3. Create a skit about your Green Schools Quest experiences to share with younger students.
4. Create signage to help explain your Green School Quest project to other students.
5. Express your commitment to green schools by sharing what you have learned with school administrators, the school board, and Parent Teacher Organization (PTO). Consider creating a top ten list or delivering a presentation to make the case for or celebrate the outcomes of sustainability actions at your school. Invite these individuals to engage in your project.
6. Share what you have learned with other schools.
7. Talk to your parents about the Green Schools Quest. Discuss some good green actions you can take at home.
8. Share with your local community. Write a press release about your participation in the Green Schools Quest to send to the local media.
9. Create a YouTube video about your Green Schools Quest project.
10. Celebrate being green pioneers in the Green Schools Quest! Invite some friends from the community to join in your celebration.
